Second Annual Convention, at Oklahoma City.

AGAINST THE ROSE LAW

Next Legislature is Looked to for Relief.

Oklahoma City, O. T., Dec. 7.-(Special.) -The Oklahoma Bankers' Association met in this city this afternoon in their second annual convention, which will be continued over tomorrow. The bankers association is the outgrowth of the Rose banking law, passed by the legislature two years ago. This law, as is usually the case with fusion legislation, was so replete with imperfections and inconsistencies that the bankers in protection to their own interests and the interests of their depositors, saw the necessity of conceried action and understanding on their part. The preliminary meeting out of which was formed the present association, met at El-Reno a year ago. There was a strong reeling there manifested to test the constitutionality of the law in the courts before rendering compliance with its provision but Attorney General Cunningham, who was present throughout the sessions, advised against such a course. He admitted the ambiguous and imperfect features of the law, but suggested that the bankers should do all in their power to obey the law, in return for which he pledged ble efforts to secure remedial legislation in the next legislature. The truculent cle-ment was pacified by this conciliatory advice and have joined in giving a loyal Notwithstanding, our long, beasted superiority as a nation, the achievements so wonderfully wrought were no more surprising to others than to ourselves, not only in conquest abroad, but in the re-quirements of the occasion at home.

To prepare for so unexpected and unusual expenditure an experiment of of-fering to the public $200,000,000 of government bonds was made so that in every respect it might be a popular loan. Noted fluanciers predicted failure, but to the surprise of all, subscriptions were mad for several times the amount,—more than $100,000,000 of the loan went to 230,000 people, each of whom subscribed for $500, or less. We are told that if the United States had accepted in currency at the subscriptions made the treasury would have absorbed seven-inthis of all the have absorbed seven-ninths of all d in circulation in the country, and that if the number of persons who sub-scribed for bonds were standing side by side they would form a line one hundred or non-enforcement of a then un-banking law.
